Mystery Solved.

THE MYSTERIOUS CHANNEL OF DISEASE
DISCOVERED
BY DR. FITZGERALD.
Who is Now Introducing this Most Invaluable Medicine called Life Invigorator.

THIS INVIGORATOR is compounded from the purest and best vegetable materials, and while its mission is to thoroughly eradicate all obnoxious diseases from the vital channels, it at the same time gives cheerfulness to the mind, restores memory, gives elasticity to the step and in reality makes the sufferer Happy Courageous Sound! It do not claim as do most venders of the so-called patent medicines that it is a certain cure for all diseases, for I do not believe that any one medicine can be compounded so as to do this; but I do claim to have discovered a secret of renewing health, cheerfulness and strength never before made known. This "Life Invigorator" reaches the channels of the following diseases: Dyspepsia, Epileptic Fits, Scrofula, Catarrh, Cancers, Humors of all kinds, Consumption, Scrofula, Weakness, Female weakness, Suffering diseases, Dyspepsia, Epileptic Fits, Scrofula, Catarrh, Cancers, Humors of all kinds, Consumption, Scrofula, Weakness, Female weakness, Debility, Dropsy, Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Blood, Heart, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Spine.

A Cincinnati alderman threatens to sue a pauper of that city for $25 damages if it doesn't stop calling him a thief and swindler.

King Koffee keeps his 3,333 wives under the same roof with his magazine of military munitions. They do about as he says.

Dan Rice proposes to make another fortune before he dies. Being in the "Ring" he ought to know how.

The new city charter of Petersburg, Va., was nearly shattered at the outset by the swapping of cannon and the liver of firecrackers.

The Brooklyn Argus commends the Illinois woman who, whenever her husband was bitten by a mad dog, drew a pistol and promptly shot the man.

One of the Duchess of Edinburgh's handkerchiefs is worth £1000, and cost for its production five years of labor, besides the eyesight of the unfortunate workwoman.

"A Little Unpleasantness: One Lawyer Fondles Another with a Rawhide." Is the painfully suggestive heading of a St. Louis local item.

A Cincinnati editor accuses another of stealing three lead pencils and a sheet of paper. The progress of editorial courtesy in Cincinnati appears to be stationery.

A young lady personated Nicotine at a San Francisco masked ball recently. Her dress was made of tobacco leaves, her necklace was cigars and she carried a fan and a parasol constructed of the weed.

The latest wrinkle in horseflesh is the discovery that after the horse is nine years old a wrinkle comes on the upper corner of the lower eyelid, and every year thereafter he has one well-defined wrinkle for every year over nine.

The Parisians are in despair at hearing of the prodigious offers that have been made to Mme. Patti in America, and feel that they have no chance of again securing the services of the prima donna in face of such competition.

Ohio has been counting up her literary jewels. She claims to be responsible for the Cary sisters, Thomas Buchannan Read, W. D. Howells, Gen. Lew Wallace and a score of lesser lights that entitle her to be placed a long distance from the rear rank.

Douglas county, Oregon, boasts of a lady who has been married nine times, has eight husbands living, and is living with none of them. More than this, she has a daughter who is now twenty-three years of age and living with her third husband.

The woods of Florida are white with the snowy flowers on the dogwood, the borders of the swamps golden with the yellow jessamine and the farm houses buried in a bed of peach and plum blossoms, while the warm air is burdened with the fragrance.

Speaking of the half naked statue of Washington, which cost $50,000, in the East Capitol Park, Grace Greenwood wittily says that his outstretched arm points reproachfully to ward those glass cases in the patent office, where hang his much desired habiliments.

A severe eruption of Mount Vesuvius is imminent. The portentious rumblings that have preceded former eruptions are reported as distinctly audible; and although no fire is yet visible, the density of the smoke indicates the proximity of fiery matter.

Musical matinees are given by the young ladies at Vassar College, each matinee being exclusively devoted to the works of some particular composer. A musical professor introduces the performance with historical and critical observations upon the composer in question.

A "fashionable" christening party in New York was postponed last week in consequence of the non-arrival of a steamer from Europe having on board the lace dress made to order in which the baby was to have appeared. The clergyman engaged was disgusted.

Before the stout English Princess Mary became the Princess of Teck, her friends tried to get up a match between her and Victor Emmanuel. He came over to see her, and after the interview is said to have exclaimed: "Why, that woman would sit on the seven hills of Rome at once."

A Chinaman at Truckee, Nevada, is studying blacksmithing, and intends shortly to hang out his shingle as an attorney and counsellor at law. He proposes to work for his clients for one half the price charged by the lawyers of Truckee, and by all doing experts to get all the legal business of the place.

Here's a chance. Said an old gentleman to Miss Phœbe Cousins: "I wish you would give up this foolish notion of running about to lectures and settle down, have a good husband and be a good housekeeper." "Miss Cousins replied: "Barkis is willing; but where's your man?"

The Colorado Legislature has adjourned. A cosmopolitan body of men composed it. The engrossing clerk was a woman, who performed her part satisfactorily to all. New Mexico, Prussia, Germany, Scotland, Canada, were represented, as were also the States of New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Tennessee, Kentucky, Vermont, Ohio, New Hampshire, Missouri, Wisconsin, Delaware.

During Col. Tom Scott's recent visit to St. Louis, he was hailed on the street by a little bootblack with, "Boss, have your boots shined?" The colonel pleasantly shook his finger at him, saying, "My boy, I am no boss." The little waif swung his box over his shoulder, and, eyeing the great railroad king from head to foot, replied, "You're boss of your boots, ain't yer?"

The New York Herald tells us that the chef who superintends Mr. Bennett's soup houses in New York is one of the foremost culinary artists in this country. He carries on a scientific correspondence with the maitre d'hotel to Emperor William of Germany, and his brother was chef to the Emperor Napoleon for many years, and is now with the Empress Eugenie at Chiselhurst.

A colored barber of Detroit has recovered a verdict of $100 damages against the owners of the steamer Jay Cooke, for refusing to allow him to dine at the first table after he had paid first class fare. This settles the question that in Michigan, at least, the holders of a first class ticket entitles to first class privileges in steamboats and on railroads without distinction of nationality, color or previous condition.

The New York court of appeals has supported a law lately by the English courts, but one which is opposed by the railroad courts of some of the other States in this country, in deciding that a passenger who has a ticket entitling him to ride on a train which he misses through the fault of the railroad company, has the right to ride on the next train. This is interesting to the public as well as to the railroads.

CARD.

Thanking the public for their liberal patronage during the past year, I would inform them that I have removed to the store recently occupied by Rollins & Dickey, where I shall be pleased to see my friends and customers.

A SCHOOL COMMITTEE MUDDLE.

Only a few weeks ago we were sympathizing with the troubles of the Boston School Board and complacently noting the developments of the legal controversy over its membership, without a suspicion that during the last two years every city in Maine has had—if not a skeleton in its closet—a number of legal ghosts exercising the functions of a superintending school committee. The greater number of these have undoubtedly rendered valuable public service, and while engaged in their praiseworthy efforts have never imagined that they were spectres in the eyes of the law. But the Portland Press has been searching for truth in the bottom of that deep and mysterious well, the Revised Statutes of 1872, and in the light of its revelations our school committees have faded away like the baseless fabric of a dream.

The matter appears to be thus: Prior to the revision of the Statutes in 1871, the school committees in this State were chosen under the Statutes of 1857, which provided in the 10th section of the chapter on Education, as follows:

> Any town may choose a committee consisting of not less than three, all or one-third each year, and invest them with the rights, powers and obligations of superintending school committee and school agents, including the power of determining the age and qualifications of scholars to be admitted into the several schools, of transferring scholars from school to school, of employing teachers, and expending money raised for school purposes.

Under this law it will be seen that only the minimum number was fixed and the larger cities elected as many more than three as they deemed expedient, Portland choosing twenty-one and Bangor six. All the cities have continued to act under this law without suspecting the change effected in that remarkable revision of 1872. By referring to the latest edition it appears that the gentleman who edited the laws revised the above section into the following shape

> Every town shall choose by ballot at its annual meeting, a Superintending School Committee of three, unless already done, to hold office as provided in section 53, and shall fill vacancies arising therein at each subsequent annual meeting, or shall, in the same manner, choose a Supervisor of Schools, who shall have the power and perform the duties which are now or may hereafter be required of the Committee aforesaid, and his election shall terminate the office of any and all existing members of such Committee.

By omitting the words "not less than" the number of members is limited to three and consequently all boards comprising more than that number have been illegally chosen and have been acting without the authority of law. The section 53 referred to provides simply that the term of office shall be three years, that one member shall be chosen each year; that two members shall constitute a quorum, etc. The twenty one persons in Portland whose official tenure has been so suddenly discredited are studying law with an intensity of amazement, and our own committee of six will be equally astonished to find that they are not a committee at all. We are entitled to three members, legally elected, but the puzzling question is: Who are the lawful three? We have recently elected two members when the law provides for the election of but one each year, and on the whole, we think that it would be somewhat troubling even to a Philadelphia lawyer to unravel the tangle of this school committee business.

Laws are excellent in their way and it is probably expedient for a State to have its "Revised Statutes." To be sure, it is rather important that care should be exercised in the revising process, but it seems that even the wise men who are selected to doctor the laws are liable to blunders. We have noticed a number of peculiarities in those same Revised Statutes of 1872, and our surprise at the wholesale slaughter of school committees was modified perhaps by the fact that we had read in that remarkable volume, in section 31 of chap. 39, concerning the inspection of illuminating oils, that if any person sells any such oil or burning fluid "that has not been so inspected and marked as unsafe for illuminating purposes," he shall be liable to a fine of $500, or six months in the county jail. It is to be hoped that this provision, however, will not deter any one from attempting to throw light upon the present school committee muddle.

It having been stated that the British claimants under the Washington Treaty are about to represent to Parliament that the Washington treaty was violated, and that the award is consequently void, for the reason that the British claimants were not permitted to be heard by counsel, Hon. R. S. Hale, counsel for the United States, says that the claimants can have no case, but the treaty provided that the Governments only should be heard by counsel, which was done.

The Boston Advertiser's Washington special says that 'careful estimates leave very little doubt of the passage by the House of McCrary's inter-State railway bill. A strong influence has quite recently come to its support. The Senate Committee has reported adversely upon the bill providing for the construction of a canal to connect the James River with the Ohio. This action indicates the policy that will prevail in the Senate in regard to most of the measures for the great works of National improvement.'

A Washington special says. "Philadelphia has a strong Centennial lobby here, and the arguments of the lady members, who are of high social position and very accomplished, may secure the desired appropriation of three millions, which means ten millions."

A Washington special says that Mr. Dawes is to have an opportunity next week, to cross-examine Jayne concerning the Customs moieties, and will probably develop Gen. Butler's connection with Jayne as counsel. The statement of Judge Noah Davis on Friday, before the Ways and Means Committee, made a greater impression against the moiety system than any statement yet made against the system.

THE SPEAKER AGAIN SUSTAINED.—"Perley" writes to the Boston Journal: "Speaker Blaine's parliamentary rulings have never been reversed on the smallest point during the five years that he has presided over the House. On Saturday afternoon the Hon. Sam Randall, a Democratic Representative from Philadelphia, undertook to call a ruling of the day previous in question, coupling therewith an issue of fact. He met with a most signal defeat, the Speaker being fully sustained, not only by the rules of the House, but by the records of the journal, both of which were appealed to by Randall."

Despatches from Washington report the District investigation to have made an appreciable start with some important developments at the very beginning relating to a gigantic speculation in the city's lands, in which Senator Stewart, himself a member of the investigating committee, seems to be deeply implicated. In view of his peculiar position it is thought that his resignation as a member of the committee would be very appropriate.

Hon. L. D. Campbell has submitted to the Ohio Constitutional Convention three propositions on the liquor question, to be submitted to the people. One provides that no liquor shall be made or sold in the State; the second that no quantity less than a gallon shall be sold, and the third, that licenses shall be issued to sell as formerly. The proposition receiving the greatest number of votes to be adopted.

THE CITY AND THE STATE FAIR.

BANGOR, March 23, 1874.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier—

As there has been more or less of misunderstanding as to the merits of the controversy in the last City Government with reference to the guarantee fund for the State Fair, the appropriation for which was vetoed by Mayor Bass, it may be interesting to the public to learn the facts in the case, and the following statement, derived from official sources, may be relied upon as strictly correct:

When the Trustees of the State Agricultural Society decided to hold a Fair in 1872, there was a lively competition among several localities with regard to where it should be held. The Trustees were agreed that Bangor should be the place, provided sufficient inducements should be offered by the City and citizens to justify the selection of this point.

At a meeting of the City Council, held not far from the first of March, 1872, it was voted that the City would furnish the halls, gas and a reasonable police force, and pay five hundred dollars in money, and would also guarantee the Society to the extent of one thousand dollars against one half the loss that might be sustained; provided that the Fairs of 1872 and 1873 should be held in Bangor, and provided also, that the citizens of Bangor should also pay a like sum of five hundred dollars and likewise guarantee to the extent of one thousand dollars against one-half the loss that might be sustained.

The Trustees decided that in view of the large outlay that would be required for holding the Fair, they could not accept this location unless they could have at least two thousand dollars in money and a guarantee of two thousand more as security against losses.

At a meeting of the City Council about April 7th, 1872, after the election of a new City Government, an additional sum of five hundred dollars was voted, upon the same conditions as the first five hundred, leaving the guaranty of one thousand dollars as before voted, and at the same meeting, or subsequently, a committee, of which Hon. Lysander Strickland was chairman, was appointed to see that the money was properly expended. All the conditions imposed having been complied with, the Major drew his order Sept. 7th, 1872, for the cash payment of one thousand dollars upon the favorable report of that committee.

The extremely unfavorable weather in both years, especially in 1872, made the expenses of the Fair larger and the receipts smaller than they otherwise would have been, and upon the close of the Fair of 1873 the Treasurer's books showed a deficit of nearly $4,000. An application was made to the City Council for the payment of the City's part of the guarantee fund, which was referred to the Finance Committee and the City Solicitor, who, after a protracted and thorough examination of the affairs of the Society, unanimously reported an order for its payment. This order was passed unanimously in the Board of Aldermen, Messrs. Pickard and Tobin, however, not being present when the vote was taken, and in the Common Council by a vote of 11 to 6. Mayor Bass interposed his veto and refused to draw his order on the City Treasury. Nearly one-half of the citizens' half of the guarantee fund has been paid, but some of the subscribers have declined to pay because of the action of the Mayor and further collections have been suspended, awaiting further action by the City.

After the veto it was currently reported that the Mayor was willing to make a bargain with the officers of the Society, proposing to them that if they would hold another Fair here and also bring here the New England Fair, he would give them this one thousand dollars of the City's money, which he refused as Mayor to pay them in compliance with the votes of three successive City Councils, and in discharge of an honorable engagement of the City.

It now rests with the present City Government to deal with this matter in accordance with the demands of justice and good faith.

PLYMOUTH CHURCH AND THE COUNCIL.

At a business meeting of Plymouth Church last Friday evening, letters from Dr Storrs and Dr Buddington's churches were read, inviting Plymouth to send Mr. Beecher and a Committee to the coming Congregational Council, but intimating that they would have no voice in the proceedings except in contradiction of misstatements, and in furnishing any information that might be asked for. After the reading of the letters the following resolutions were adopted.

Whereas, Communications have been received from the Clerk of the Church of the Pilgrims and the Clinton Avenue Church, inclosing copies of the letter missive calling a Council of Congregational Churches and Ministers, with the accompanying statements, and inviting the Church to appear by its Pastor and a Committee before the said Council to correct any statements of facts which may seem to them erroneous, and to furnish any other specific information which the Council may request.

Resolved, That the calling of this ex parte Council to consider the affairs of a Church which has not declined a mutual council, is the consummation of a course of proceedings against it which is as irregular as unwarrantable, and against which we have felt bound to protest from the beginning. That we recognize in the statement in the invitation, as in former communications addressed to us, a persistent attempt to put this Church under accusation and on trial, and that we cannot accept the invitation of these two Churches to appear before a Council in the calling of which we have been permitted to take no part, in which we have not been offered the rights of equal members, and in which we are not even allowed to be ordinary defendants, but only to be witnesses to correct errors and answer questions propounded to us.

Resolved, That the clerk of the church be directed to transmit copies of this preamble and resolutions to the Church of the Pilgrims and Clinton Avenue Church.

It was then moved that a meeting be held on Wednesday next to take any action made requisite by the session of the Council on the night before. "It is not often the privilege of a church," said Mr. Beecher, in support of this proposal, "twice in its lifetime to have such eminence in Congregationalism given to it by such eminent teachers. Therefore, although it may be inconvenient for some of you, I hope there will be a full attendance. It is our pride, if we have any pride, that we do not conduct our business by cliques, but by our whole church. Therefore, if any reply should be necessary on Wednesday, to anything the Council may have said to us, let it be the voice of the whole church." The motion was carried, and the meeting adjourned amid applause.

It is reported from Mississippi that Harris H. Barksdale, Esq., one of the proprietors of the Jackson Clarion, long the leading Democratic paper in the State, has lately joined the Republican Club in Jackson, and that his "defection" receives the hearty approval of Major Ethel Barksdale, his father, the editor-in-chief of the Clarion, who has long exercised a controlling influence in the politics of Mississippi, in common with the distinguished Barksdale family. A correspondent says: "Gen. Wm. Barksdale, who led a Sharpsburg leading his splendid Mississippi brigade, was one of the most ultra 'Yance Democrats just before the war. With him abolition was the sum of all moral, social and political villainy. In this sentiment all of his name heartily concurred, and being an officer, soldier and citizen who may differ on such a peculiar subject, which went like flame over the Union in January, 1861. The idea of a Barksdale as anything else but a Democrat is preposterous, and those declarations seems as much like nonsense as the proposition to sing the Saint Sedan of the Democratic party in this State. It is, in fact, already dead."

DR. SCHENCK'S

Standard Remedies!

The standard remedies for all diseases of the lungs are Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, Schenck's Sea-weed Tonic, and Schenck's Mandrake Pills, and if taken before the lungs are destroyed a speedy cure is effected.

To these three medicines Dr. J. H. Schenck, of Philadelphia owes his unrivalled success in the treatment of pulmonary diseases.

The Pulmonic Syrup ripens the morbid matter in the lungs, so that it can be thrown up by an easy expectoration; when the phlegm or matter is ripe, a slight cough will throw it off the patient has rest and the lungs begin to heal. To enable the Pulmonic Syrup to do this, Schenck's Mandrake Pills and Schenck's Sea-weed Tonic must be freely used to cleanse the stomach and liver. Schenck's Mandrake Pills act on the liver, removing all obstructions, relax the gall bladder, the bile starts freely, and the liver is soon relieved.

Schenck's Sea Weed Tonic is a gentle stimulant and alterative, the alkali of which it is composed mixes with the food and prevents souring. It assists the digestion by toning up the stomach to a healthy condition so that the food and Pulmonic Syrup will make good blood, then the lungs heal, and the patient will surely get well if care is taken to prevent fresh cold.

Dr. Schenck can be consulted at the Quincy House, Boston on Wednesday, March 25th, April 8th and 22nd, May 13th and 27th.

Advice will be given free, but for a thorough examination with the Respirometer, the charge is $5 00.

Schenck's Medicines are sold by all Druggists through out the country.

Schenck's Almanac can be had of all Druggists, free.

DR BABCOCK, desires to say that having fulfilled his engagements in Philadelphia and Boston, and his clinics with his Steam Apparatus, he has now returned to Bangor for good and may be found at his Office as usual. He takes this opportunity to inform the public that his Steam arrangement has had the admiration and appreciation, in an exceedingly marked and gratifying degree, of every person who has seen it, both at home and abroad. Dr Babcock would respectfully request all those who contemplate favoring him with their patronage, to call and make their engagements previous to the day they desire, since his time has been engaged in this manner so fully during the past year, as to make it impossible for him to attend to many who call without previous notice of their coming. Patients living at a distance will please notify by letter; thereafter he will, when desired, administer Nitrous Oxide or Laughing Gas, for the extraction of teeth and to those who may prefer it, he will, as usual, administer Ether.

PLATONIC

BY WM D. TENNETT.

I had sworn to be a bachelor, she had sworn to be a maid,
For we quite agreed in doubting whether man immortal say said;
Besides we held our highest loves—fair Science read my heart,
And she said lady young affections were all wound up in Art

So we laughed at all those wise men who say that of mishap cannot live
'Twixt man and woman, unless each has something more to give
We would be friends, and friends as true as e'er were man and man—
I'd be a second David, and she Miss Jonathan.

We scorned all sentimental trash—vows, kisses, tears and sighs,
High friendship such as ours might well shock childish arts despise,
We liked each other, that was all, quite all there was to say.
So we just shook hands upon it, in a business sort of way

We shaked our secrets and our joys, together hoped and feared,
With common purpose sought the goal that young ambition reared
We dreamed together of the days, the dream bright days to come
We were as utterly confidential, and we called each other "chum"

And many a day we wandered together o'er the hills
Hooking bugs and butterflies, and she the rushes and rustic bridges, and the like, that picture makers prize
To rest with their waterfalls, and groves and summer skies.

And many a quiet evening, in hours of full release
We floated down the river, or loafed beneath the trees,
And talk it in long gradation from the poets to the weather,
While the western sky and my cigar burned slowly out together.

Yet through it all not a word or look fell-tale
Of love or sighs,
The laugh of warm sentiment than friendly sympathy,
We talked of love as coolly as we talked of Newton
And thought no more of being one than we did of being three.

"Well, good bye chum!" I took her hand, for the time had come to go—
My going meant our parting, when to meet we did not know,
I had lingered long, and said farewell with a very honest heart,
For although we were but friends, its hard for honest 22 souls to part

Good-bye, old fellow I don't forget your friends be well
And some day, when you've lots of time, drop a line or two to me
The words came lightly, gaily, but a great sob just behind
Welled up and with it story of quite a different kind.

And then she raised her eyes to mine, great liquid eyes of blue
Filled to the brim and running over, like violet cups of dew
One long long glance, and then I did, what I never did before—
Perhaps the tears meant friendship, but I'm not sure the kiss meant more

LOVE IN A PULLMAN CAR.

A ROMANCE OF THE BAIL.

Among the pleasantest things in an itinerant Bohemian life I count the perpetual meetings at most unexpected places of people whom you have known before in widely different localities. An hour ago my friend and I started for a stroll on this matchless Galveston beach. All the afternoon we had sat on the upper gallery, watching the long, low surf-crests that crept so slowly and surely landward, all the afternoon we had listened, in the pauses of our light chattering, to the ceaseless refrain which those same white-capped waves were chanting, till the beauty of the scene and the suren song tempted us down to the shore. Oh, it was lovely, sauntering there between the oleander-planted walks breathing their rich, exquisite perfume and gathering handfuls of the pink blossoms. A few carriages had come for the regular sunset drive, some German women were gathering shells, a few children with bare, dimpled feet, were wading out into the coming waves, to run back with screams of laughter when some swifter billow washed up higher than the rest, and over the whole picture the fast-rested the mellow glow reflected from the crimsoned west.

The occupants of the carriages raised their eyebrows in pitiful amazement as they rolled past us, for a pleasure walk was beyond their comprehension, and my friend laughed, telling me that she always knew Northern visitors began to they loved to wander a bout and Texans never do

"I'm sure they regard me as mildly insane for my long walks, but, see, this time we have companions in our madness," she continued, pointing to a pair who were standing a little distance beyond

Evidently a bride and groom, I asserted, for

"Both were young and one wore white,"

and there were the usual unmistakable signs of recent ownership quite apparent in the air of the young man, who just then leaned over the lady's waist more closely and, as her blushing veil hid his face, I suspected it securely and in the act she turned her face toward us, startling me with its familiar look.

Isn't she beautiful?" said my friend

I answered her absently, since I was hunting every nook in my memory, for the counterpart of the fair girl before us. I was sure I had known her—but where?

An impertinent wave broke over the lovers' heads and in a moment the bride's dainty boots would have suffered, but misled escaped her swiftly, and raising her fan back a few steps, coming close to us I know then where I had seen the happy pair, but I went very soberly towards them, only quietly saying

"Is this what came of that journey?"

"By Jove!" ejaculated my hero in rough English tones, seizing both my hands in a grip that nearly crushed them, while the bride blushed laughed, and added her graceful greeting

Wasn't it an odd encounter? Just saw those young people at Cheyenne, a September, 18—, now they met strolling on the shore of the Gulf, and my friend asserted that we had picked up something better than shells this time for she demanded the story at once, and I will tell it to you just as I told it to her.

On Friday, September 12, 1873—I like to be accurate—the San Francisco train stood on the track at Omaha, watching the arrival, from the opposite side of the Missouri, of Eastern passengers. There were four Pullman cars attached, three were already filled or engaged by telegram, and the officials in charge were grumbling because "Boss Tweed" and his party occupied six entire sections.—The "Boss" stayed closely in his compartment, for Nast had made his face so perfectly familiar to every one that he encountered more staring than he liked. His daughter, a sister of Miss Ellis, who had known "Tom" at Toronto, and Tom asserts that she rules him splendidly. I'll give something to see her eyes flash again, but to-morrow I am to say good-by to our hero and heroine, who sail for home in Cape Breton, and Madge is keeping house in Sacramento.

minutes; our hero stood twisting his moustache with vexation, till growing desperate he remarked:

"Say, Madge! That girl with the dark eyes is stunning, isn't she? I wish you would make her acquaintance."

"Indeed! That's the view you admired, was it? Well, sir, I shall do nothing of the kind; I have no vocation for stunning girls. Come I have no vocation for stunning girls. Come—that wasn't his name, but we'll play it was—made a mocking salute, and retored laughing:

"Well, madame, I'm quite equal to helping myself. You just wait till you want to know some 'stunning' fellow!"

Madge only gave him a look of supreme contempt and walked off, tossing over her shoulder a command to fetch the hamper, for she was hungry, and no supper could be had till we reached Grand Island then, turning to me, she said with an exceedingly provoking air, "Positively, that boy is too ridiculous. He gets silly over these American girls all the time, but I won't help him!"

"That boy!" I repeated with intense amusement, for the delinquent stood six feet high and was evidently older than his monitress who lectured him in the gravest fashion all the while we were nibbling at the contents of that never-to-be-forgotten hamper. It reminded me of the famous one which Mr. Wardle carried to the races, and I think we enjoyed it as much as Mr Pickwick and his friends enjoyed their at fresco lunch, though the sleepy fat boy was not in attendance.

The usual funny scenes occurred during the stowing away process at night, but the long hours passed swiftly, and the "infants" of misery and restlessness, which we had to endure, were few and far between. Madge was too soon. It was still enough to see the way in which everybody peeped from their sections to investigate the "reason why," and then, having viewed the situation, each suddenly discovered all the other curious heads, and disappeared The lamenting wail was from the stout lungs of a four-year-old boy thus time. His mother arranging her toilet pleasantly, paid no heed to his screams, and the little imp danced with passion. Suddenly Madge heard a vexed fame between her curtains, and her ringing voice called out imperatively.

"Tom! for heaven's sake get a slipper and spank that child! He's quite too old to cry like that, and his mother doesn't seem to know enough to manage him!" Then she vanished

Tom took the laugh I began in a chorus of stifled chuckles, but she had spoken for us all and a hearty endorsement sounded from every berth, while the amazed parent picked up her off-spring, slapped him soundly, and looked round with a "Please-ma'am-what elephant shall I do?' face which was funnier than Madge's prescription.

Our train was "behind time" and breakfast was only a dim prophecy, so we beguiled the hours as best we might watching for buffalo (the last of which I shall see, spying several groups of the pretty, graceful antelopes, passing swiftly through wide spread settlements of the funny little prairie-dogs, and opening our eyes widely at the cactus which grew in such prickly profusion on either side of the track. I found the face of my English beauty more enchanting than anything else, for it was as changeful as her thoughts Suddenly she exclaimed:

"I wonder where Tom can be!" and suiting the action to the word, she started in pursuit She was hardly gone a minute, then with a commically tearful face, she begged me to come too We found the deserter closely tucked beside the very girl he had admired the day before, for both of them were occupying the same car step, while the rest of the gay group were camped on the platform. Of course I laughed, while Madge evinced her presence by reaching over and energetically pulling a curl of the handsome head that was so dangerously near the young lady's rosy cheeks

Tom started, looked around, and coolly said "Ah, Madge! I thought it was you Well, I can't very well move just now, but Miss Ellis, if you can look over your shoulder you will see my sister Miss Fairfax, allow me to present Miss Ellis"

The scamp certainly showed good taste, for Miss Ellis was very lovely, both in feature and expression She blushed a little, but bowed as gracefully as her position permitted, and her voice was singularly sweet when she said, I find that Mr Fairfax is an old schoolmate of my brother's. Then, were at Toronto together"

It was Madge's turn to blush now, not a little, but furiously, while Tom's mischievous eyes danced with delight at her confusion, and I did some "Yankee" "guessing" about that brother, which proved quite correct, and then I sat down to watch further developments and to enjoy the happiness before me. O youth and hope and beauty! What brave possessions ye are! Ye hold in your magical glasses such rare libations, and we drink such eager draughts, believing the visions they bring to heart and brain.

The train roared on. "Boss Tweed" came out and stood on the platform of his car, watching the strange, desolate lands we were passing, Gentlemen consoled themselves with cigars, ladies tried all conceivable changes of position and read persistently, while all the happiness and delight in the whole train seemed to concentrate in the knot of young people about me Madge sent for the hamper, the young ladies opened their baskets, and when we reached Cheyenne I left Tom seated on reversed water pail, with all the gay group around him pampering him by offers of the choicest morsels, and my queenly Madge as merry as the rest directing at him a perpetual volley of saucy speeches

They were all going through to Sacramento. My prophetic soul told me what would happen, for the imprisonment in a Pullman car for a week of two mutually susceptible young people has an almost certain result — Nothing in Cupid is surer than a flirtation, while something more serious is very apt to follow. Tom gave his own version of the story, declaring fate had been too much for him, for during those days of travel he had grown so used to caring for Miss Ellis, so accustomed to playing a devoted lover "just to tease Madge" that when their destination was attained the force of habit made him still seek the young lady's side as he was so fond of him that, well, really now, you know, a fellow didn't like himself in a queer position, and I had to marry her just to save her feelings"

The pretty bride had heard all this before, so she only rejoined with the meekest air

"I'm trying to show how sensible I am of his pure benevolence"

"Altogether an accident" but what a delicious consequence! I am telling you a true story, dear friends, and if you will find out the history of many a marriage it will be found to have had an equally small beginning

"And Madge?" I think I hear you say Well, Madge was going to Sacramento to be present at the engagement to that same brother of Miss Ellis's, who had known "Tom" at Toronto, and Tom asserts that she rules him splendidly. I'll give something to see her eyes flash again, but to-morrow I am to say good-by to our hero and heroine, who sail for home in Cape Breton, and Madge is keeping house in Sacramento.

Two years ago last September I had a severe cold, with a cough for some time. The cold ran by settling on my throat, dry and very painful I used various kinds of syrup recommended by friends who noticed my condition, but to no avail. My physician prescribed Whiskey, and then Cod Liver Oil I took three quarts of the oil and but half a teaspoonful of the whiskey. I continued taking Scott's Emulsion of the Cod Liver Oil for several months, but it's Expectorant tonic bottles, and some four or five other remedies, continually growing weaker, losing my appetite and not getting well at all hoped on my self. In fact, I was marked by my family, and almost every person that I met, as sure to die

But by a change took place. One day last winter a circular was thrown in my office, which advertised Adamson's Botanic Balsam, (thank God) I read their circular very carefully, and at once sent for a bottle. I at last found it and began taking it regularly and as per direction. Before I had used half a bottle I noticed a change I then purchased another bottle, and nearly finished it. Found myself about my business to such an extent that I am now gaining in flesh, and generally speaking, feel good as ever. This all caused by the use of Adamson's Balsam

Many of my friends are using it to everybody similarly afflicted, and can this day give you the name and residence of at least fifty persons who have been cured of a cough, by the use of this Balsam, comparatively speaking, a few dollars invested in this article is to his stock, he did so and sold ninety bottles in less than a fortnight, and I have not heard of one being dissatisfied

I would as soon think of losing property as financial loss by trusting to such house without a guarantee. Congress is a safe one I think. Yours, With assurance of my highest regard, I am gratefully yours, &c. EMERY COX.
